

Ewerks' Enlightenments

November 14th, 2008

Parents,

WOW!!! What a crazy week or was it really two weeks. This week has not been a usual week in 2E. I hope next week is much better. I was gone on Monday and Thursday due to an appointment for myself and a sick child. I am thankful that the kids were able to have the same substitute on both occasions. Mrs. Gruessing is amazing. She taught second grade until she retired and did a surgical leave for me two years ago so she knows exactly how I do things and handle situations.

Thanksgiving is just around the corner and so is our 3rd Annual Thanksgiving Feast in 2E. This can only happen with GREAT PARENT volunteers and food donations. We will be having a very traditional meal and on the back you will find the items needed to make the meal a success.

Another concern that came up this week is homework and whose responsibility it is. I have made it very plain to the students that it is their responsibility and NOT their parents to make sure homework is completed. Believe it or not the things that become a habit in the area of homework completion at this level will either be a great asset or will haunt you in years to come. If you want them to be responsible in 5th, 6th, 7th grades etc, then they need to be responsible now.

Have a GREAT WEEKEND!!!!!!!!!!

Krista
